The installation procedure is quick and uneventful, and doesn't require special attention from the user. Once it finishes, you can check out a Readme file and the single window with a plain layout, representing CC checker's interface. All you have to do is write your credit card number in the dedicated dialog, and verify it with the simple click of a button. It takes 2 parameters. one is an object, the other a callback function. The callback function can be called many times at once, that is why I want to use a debounce to help users to wait 2 sec after each click so that they won't accidentally do more than one click in a second However when I am using _.debounce the callback function passed as an argument inside the _.debounce() is optional. _.debounce(_.throttle(a, 1000), function(){ console.log('Action!', a); }) from what I know about debounce(), the callback function is supposed to be passed and in this case, that is a must. So I need to set a value to a variable, if a is undefined it can't be called, and if a is an object, it is allowed to be called. how do I do this? A: You could check if a was undefined before calling debounce(). _.debounce(_.throttle(a, 1000), function() { if (a) { console.log('Action!', a); } }) Another option might be to use _.debounceWith() instead: _.debounce(_.throttle(a, 1000), _.debounceWith(function() { if (a)
